The PW is a West Coast communist newspaper published weekly in San Francisco.

The San Francisco "News Call Bulletin," a daily newspaper published in San Francisco, California, in its issue of April 28, 1964, page 15, carried an article datelined Buffalo, New York. This article related that HAYDEN was in Buffalo, New York, to speak at a meeting sponsored by the Anti House Un-American Committee (HUAC) Committee of Buffalo, protesting HUAC hearings to be held that week in Buffalo. HAYDEN is quoted as charging that the House Committee on Un-American Activities (HCUA) "practically destroyed the Hollywood film industry." HAYDEN, according to this article, also stated that the Communist Party (CP) has never been an effective force in American politics and he said he was too much of an individualist to be active in the organization. He stated that he had belonged to the CP for a period of six months.

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~III. MISCELLANEOUS

The San Rafael, California, "Independent Journal" newspaper, in its issue of October 17, 1963, on page 1, carried an article disclosing that STERLING HAYDEN had written his first book called "The Wanderer," which was being published in October, 1963, by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. HAYDEN, in an interview with a reporter of this newspaper, stated his book was written primarily to present his view of society. According to HAYDEN, "Our emphasis on material things is dismal...he expressed concern over the forces of business that control the country, which are turning people into mush...The real menace, Hayden stated, is not communism but those things which are washing out people's ability to challenge and speak out on issues."

Concerning his own association with the CP, he said, "The only thing I am ashamed of is that, back in 1951, I did not have the strength to stand up to the House Un-American Committee and tell them that while I would discuss my own activities, I would not cooperate in naming names. I was what they called a cooperative witness. It is the one thing of which I am deeply ashamed in my life."

HAYDEN continued, stating that he joined the Party "emotionally, not intellectually, and left for personal reasons and because he was not suited for the discipline the Party requires of its members."

The San Francisco "Examiner," a newspaper published daily in San Francisco, California, in its issue of June 17, 1964, carried an article relating that on June 16, 1964, HAYDEN had received a sentence of probation for one year and $220 fine for his participation in a sit-in demonstration on Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco, on April 11, 1964, after pleading nolo contendere. The article continued that HAYDEN had participated in a civil rights demonstration on Van Ness Avenue, and that at the time of sentencing, asked the court's permission to go to Rome to make a movie, and this permission was granted by the court to HAYDEN.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO ABOLISH THE HOUSE UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES COMMITTEE

The "Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications" issued December 1, 1961, by the Committee on Un-American Activities, U. S. House of Representatives, page 115, contains the following citation regarding the National Committee to Abolish the Un-American Activities Committee (NCAUAC).

"Cited as a 'new organization' set up in the summer of 1960 to lead and direct the Communist Party's 'Operation Abolition' campaign. Seven of the national leaders of this group have been identified as Communists.

(Committee on Un-American Activities, House Report 1278 on the Truth About the Film 'Operation Abolition,' Part 1, October 3, 1961, p. 5.)"

A source has advised that the NCAUAC changed its name on March 3, 1962, to include the word "House" in its name, thereby becoming known as the National Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The "DW" of 10/16/57, page 6, column 1, in Dave Platt's column entitled "Movies, TV, and -----," it was stated that "Playhouse 90" had miscast Sterling Hayden. According to the article, Sterling Hayden on 10/3/57, was in the "Playhouse 90" production of "A Sound of Different Drummers."

According to Platt, Hayden played the part of a "victim of book burners" who, when brought before a committee investigating subversive activities, refused to dishonor himself by turning "informer" and naming names.

Platt wrote that in real life Hayden did name names, did become an "informer." He also wrote that Hayden turned over to the HCUA the names of numerous movie people "on a conjectural basis."

Platt's article further stated that Hayden was not sure whether they were or had been communist and that many of those named were dismissed from their jobs.

The following references revealed that Sterling Hayden was one of the sponsors of the Citizens Committee on Inquiry, as of August, 1964. This committee, with national offices located at 156 Fifth Avenue, NYC, was set up by Mark Lane, a NY lawyer, who was assisting Thomas Buchanan in his campaign to depict the assassination of John F. Kennedy as a rightist plot. Buchanan was a former newsman and an avowed communist. Mark Lane had submitted to the Warren Commission a brief proclaiming Oswald's innocence.

Issue 1

This is the first issue of the national newsletter of the Resistance. It will be published weekly and sent to Resistance centers and key persons of the Resistance, both across the nation and in Europe. Its purposes are to keep each Resistant regularly informed of all Resistance activities, to provide a central clearing house for Resistance information, and to bring any effective tactics and imaginative new ideas to the attention of all centers of the Resistance. We believe that this publication is important to the effectiveness of the movement, and ask the cooperation of the Resistance centers in the following ways:

Every Monday, send us a report by airmail of the activities at your center during the previous week. We are specifically looking for

- 1) formation or enlargement of Resistance and support groups
- 2) harassment by the authorities;
- 3) accounts of demonstrations and confrontations, being sure to note
  - i) accurate number of persons involved,
  - ii) names of important persons involved,
  - iii) tactics which proved most effective, and
  - iv) coverage given by mass media;
- 4) a calendar of Resistance events planned by your center or occurring in your area.

Brevity is not the object in these reports; anything you wish to mention will be welcomed. The important point is to send these reports regularly, every Monday. Even if you feel nothing of national significance has occurred at your center during the week, write us a note saying so.

This weekly correspondence should include clippings or reproductions of news articles or editorials relevant to the Resistance. Carefully identify their sources for future reference.

Send us any publication of your center which you feel is of national importance. We can have it xeroxed and included in the Newsletter for national distribution.

Phone any urgent information to us, or send it by special delivery mail. We are prepared to relay the information quickly and at very short notice.

We especially want any creative ideas for resistance activities. A letters column has been established in the newsletter for just such a purpose, and it is hoped that we can start an effective dialogue of ideas through this column.

Communications should be sent to

Calif LOS ANGELES: Plans for December 4th include a church service and a confrontation similar to Boston's, with the cards to be turned in to the Federal Attorney's office immediately afterward. A Unitarian church has already been obtained for the occasion, and it is hoped that ROBERT MCAFEE BROWN or possibly BISHOP PIKE will appear at the service.....Only four or five members of the LA Resistance have been contacted by the FBI....New Resistance groups are being formed in Orange County, of all places. Already two veterans have agreed to "do something" with their discharge papers and at least three others have decided to turn in their draft cards....With only three hours' notice, a demonstration of from 30 to 50 persons was organized in support of DAN BROMLEY. The demonstrators handed in statements to the deputy federal attorney announcing their complicity with Dan and demanding equal treatment. The statements were, of course, refused, but the event commanded about five minutes of prime television news time.....There are several projects in the air. December 1 marks the beginning of a fund-raising campaign, the exact nature of which has not yet been determined. On December 4 the LA Resistance plans a walk from Los Angeles (after the confrontation) to Lompoc Prison Farm, where non-cooperators are currently being held. The march, approximately 200 miles long, is planned in conjunction with the War Resistance League.....The LA Resistance is currently looking for new offices, and would like a commune along the lines of Palo Alto's Peace and Liberation Commune....CHRISTIAN HAYDEN, son of Sterling Hayden, is now working for the LA Resistance and apparently receives full encouragement from his family.....UCLA's Dow demonstration, with about 500 students and 20 faculty members participating, is an encouraging sign on a usually lethargic

UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
Washington, D. C.

PUBLIC HEARING

The Committee on Un-American Activities met pursuant to call at 10:00 a.m. in room 226, Old House Office Building, Hon. John S. Wood (chairman) presiding.

Committee members present: Representatives John S. Wood (chairman), Francis E. Walter, Morgan M. Moulder, Clyde Doyle, Harold H. Velde, Bernard W. Kearney (appearance as noted in transcript), Donald L. Jackson, and Charles E. Potter.

Staff members present: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; Thomas W. Beale, Sr., assistant counsel; Louis J. Russell, senior investigator; William A. Wheeler, Courtney E. Owens, and James Andrews, investigators; John W. Carrington, clerk; and A. S. Poore, editor.

Mr. WOOD. The committee will be in order.

It must be obvious to everyone here that the committee is operating under rather cramped conditions. I hope the audience will cooperate with us in maintaining order, without the necessity of calling it to your attention too often.

The quarters here are small and the space is very limited, and it will be very greatly appreciated if people in the audience will refrain from smoking, and certainly from audible conversation.

I will ask the members of the press and photographers taking pictures here to try to disturb the proceedings as little as possible.

Mr. Counsel, are you ready to proceed?

Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, Mr. Chairman. We are ready to proceed this morning with the continuance of the Hollywood hearings.

Mr. WOOD. Let the record disclose that there are present members of the committee Walter, Moulder, Doyle, Velde, Jackson, Potter and Wood.

Who is the first witness, Mr. Counsel?

Mr. TAVENNER. I would like to call at this time Mr. Sterling Hayden.

Mr. WOOD. Is Mr. Hayden in the hearing room?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. WOOD. Will you raise your right hand and be sworn.

You solemnly swear the testimony you give before this committee shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. HAYDEN. I do.

Mr. WOOD. Have a seat.

TESTIMONY OF STERLING HAYDEN

Mr. TAVENNER. You are Mr. Sterling Hayden?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you born, Mr. Hayden?

Mr. HAYDEN. March 26, 1916, Montclair, New Jersey.

Mr. TAVENNER. What is your present place of residence?

Mr. HAYDEN. 10731 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles 24.

Mr. TAVENNER. What is your present occupation?

Mr. HAYDEN. Actor.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you please state for the committee your educational background, just briefly?

Mr. HAYDEN. Well, I went to public schools in Montclair, New Jersey up until the time I was ten years old. After that we started moving around, and I finished about half of my second year high school at various places in New England, and then quit and went to sea.

Mr. TAVENNER. How old were you when you went to sea?

Mr. HAYDEN. Fifteen.

Mr. TAVENNER. Fifteen?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. What do you mean, you "went to sea"?

Mr. HAYDEN. Well, I simply left home and started working on ships, and worked seven years sailing vessels, fishing boats, and so forth.

Mr. TAVENNER. You followed that occupation for seven years?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. That was my trade.

Mr. TAVENNER. During that period of time did you become master of ship?

Mr. HAYDEN. When I was twenty-one I finally got a master's license and took command of a ship and started making long voyages.

Mr. TAVENNER. During that period of time did you become acquainted with a Captain Warwick Tompkins?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. I met him when I was fourteen, in Boston, Massachusetts. He had a schooner and I wanted to go to work on it, but he said I was too young. I never got to know him too well personally at that time.

Mr. TAVENNER. After the completion of your experiences at sea, when you became ship master, what calling did you follow?

Mr. HAYDEN. Another fellow and I tried to operate a schooner. We didn't have much success. We lost the ship, finally. I was broke and in New York, and through accident I met a producer with Paramount and made a test and got a contract May 1, 1940, as an actor.

Mr. TAVENNER. And how long did you follow that occupation?

Mr. HAYDEN. Well, ever since, except for the war years. I left Hollywood in the fall of 1941 and returned to Hollywood under contract in the spring of 1946, so I was away for five years.

Mr. TAVENNER. Then you were in Hollywood under your first contract between 1940 and 1941?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee how you obtained your first contract with Paramount?

Mr. HAYDEN. Well, I was pretty much of a fluke. I had never given a thought to going into the acting profession, but the seafaring thing was washed up, and I simply met a correspondent in Boston who knew a producer, and he told the producer about me, and he contacted me in New York and made a test, a very oad test, but it got me a contract with Paramount and I went to work as an actor.

Mr. TAVENNER. While you were on the West Coast serving under this first contract, was Captain Warwick Tompkins on the West Coast also?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. He had at that time, I believe in 1938 or 1937, he had shifted his base of operations from Boston to San Francisco, therefore he was in San Francisco in 1940 when I first got out there.

I felt kind of lost in Hollywood, not really being an actor by inclination, and one time when I was feeling particularly low I decided to pay him a visit. I went to San Francisco and saw him. He at that time, or previously, had become, I believe, an open and avowed Communist. He made no bones about it. He talked about very little else, and he started to deluge me with propaganda.

Mr. TAVENNER. Were you a Communist at that time?

Mr. HAYDEN. No. It had never entered my head.

Mr. TAVENNER. Do you recall meeting any other persons at that time who you either knew then or have found out since were members of the Communist Party, through your connections with Captain Tompkins?

Mr. HAYDEN. On one of those visits, I believe probably that it was in 1941, while he was in San Francisco living on his ship, he said he wanted to introduce me to what he called, and I quote, "an old warrior in the class struggle," "Pop" Folkoff. I met him at a luncheon. I thought he was a retired tailor at that time. What he was, I don't know to this day. Who else I may have met that year, I don't remember too clearly.

Mr. TAVENNER. During your first contract in Hollywood, did you join any particular unions or groups?

Mr. HAYDEN. I joined the Screen Actors' Guild, as every actor does. That was all.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was the way in which Captain Tompkins went about consulting with you regarding communism? Tell us a little more in detail about that.

Mr. HAYDEN. All right, sir. If I may change the word, I wouldn't say he consulted with me. I think he recognized I was at a peculiar stage in my life. I was sort of betwixt and between. The sea had always been my calling. This was now denied me, or I had denied myself it. I was feeling restless and dissatisfied in Hollywood. He used the device of talking and talking and asking why I didn't read more. I had never thought in political terms at all. That was another world, which I am not particularly proud of today.

Mr. TAVENNER. As I understand, your work in Hollywood was interrupted by your service during the period of the war?

Mr. HAYDEN. That it was.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell us the circumstances under which you left Hollywood?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. TAVENNER. But before doing that, had you been engaged in the production of any particular movies prior to your leaving Hollywood?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. I made two pictures. I had only been in Hollywood two weeks when I was cast in second lead in "Virginia," and a short while later in "Bahama Passage."

All during the summer of 1941 I was churning inside, thinking about the war. I would like to claim, but I can't claim, I knew this country was in danger, but I knew something was going on, and I wanted to get in it.

In August 1941--I have the date here so I can give it to you exactly--it was September 15, 1941, I went to the heads of Paramount and said I would like to break my contract and leave for an indefinite length of time. They wanted to know why. I didn't know what to tell them. I said I didn't want to act, I didn't know what I wanted to do, I just wanted to leave. So

I did leave. I went East.

I contacted Colonel Donovan, who was then Coordinator of Information. I knew him through his son, who had sailed around the world with me in a schooner. He said he was setting up an organization in which men would be needed to train American troops, or volunteers, because this was prior to Pearl Harbor, in guerrilla warfare, and one of the men thought it a good idea to go to England or Scotland.

I went to Scotland and trained with the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders three months, went to England, went to a parachute school, broke my ankle on the sixth jump, and came back to the United States. I was unable to continue with the training because of my broken ankle, and I did not want to be placed in some administrative capacity, so I went to the Elco Boat Works in Bayonne, New Jersey, and worked with test crews.

Then I was offered a commission as ensign in the Navy, which I declined because I thought I should have a higher rank, since I had been master of ships. I thought I could operate a schooner to the West Indies, because of the shortage of cargo vessels.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was that during the period when the waters in that area were infested with German submarines?

Mr. HAYDEN. I think there were quite a few down there, yes. So I went to the West Coast, bought a half interest in a schooner, and hauled freight for the War Shipping Administration through the late summer and fall of 1942. This was rather a lucrative thing, really.

Mr. TAVENNER. How lucrative was it?

Mr. HAYDEN. If things went smoothly and efficiently, without any trouble, which was not all of the time, we stood to gross between $3,000 and $11,000 per voyage. We were taking detonators and explosives, the theory being it was better to put them on a small vessel, so if it was lost it wouldn't make much difference, rather than put them with the cargo on a large ship.

In October of that year I met with a bunch of Marines in the West Indies, and it entered my head to enlist. I sold the schooner, went to New York, enlisted, and went to Parris Island. That started another phase. Shall I continue?

Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, I would like a full statement of your record.

Mr. HAYDEN. I went through boot camp at Parris Island. At that time two men were selected out of each company for OSS at Quantico. I changed my name to John Hamilton. I changed it because I wanted to get away from Hollywood as much as possible. When I was in boot camp there seemed to be a good deal of curiosity about Hollywood. I changed my name. I was commissioned as Second Lieutenant. I went back to OSS. I don't know the exact date that the Coordinator of Information became OSS,

The OSS shipped us first to Cairo. We were supposed to go to Greece, but we were shipped to Bari, Italy. I went to Bari, and then began a long term of duty with the Yugoslav Partisans there.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was the general character of your work with the Partisans of Yugoslavia?

Mr. HAYDEN. It varied a good deal. They claimed they wanted supplies. The first assignment I had, the first day I arrived in Bari, was to coordinate the handling of a fleet of 28 or 30 schooners. Two weeks later I was placed in charge of the port at Monopoli, Italy. We built up the staff and operated these schooners across the Adriatic. I don't remember the exact dates, but we would frequently go off on reconnaissance expeditions along the coast, along the mainland, trying to get new routes. We got up to Trieste on one trip.

Along about the middle of spring,--

Mr. TAVENNER. Let me interrupt a minute. Will you go back and try to fix the date when you began your assignment at Bari and took over control of the Port at Monopoli?

Mr. HAYDEN. I would say that was the first of December, the first week in December, let me say.

Mr. TAVENNER. Of what year?

Mr. HAYDEN. 1942.

Mr. TAVENNER. And then try, as nearly as you can, to coordinate the narrative with dates.

Mr. HAYDEN. All right, sir. I would say we were in Monopoli six weeks to two months, and during that period of time I made two or three reconnaissance expeditions over into Yugoslavia.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was the purpose of those?

Mr. HAYDEN. To find a more efficient route of supplies to the Partisan forces in the interior, to get the supplies through the German blockade to the forces fighting in the mountains.

Mr. TAVENNER. That means you had to pass a German sea blockade as well as a land blockade?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, it did.

Mr. TAVENNER. And your work was behind the German lines?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, it was, particularly later on when we were working in the interior. At that time we were operating along the periphery of the coast, more or less.

Before I got in the work on the interior, I was put in command, told to take a small fishing boat and operate it across the Adriatic. We could carry five to six tons of supplies, medical and other supplies, into Albania, islands off the Greek coast, and Yugoslavia. I think we made eighteen or twenty trips before the "E" boats patrolling the coast really got wise to what was going on, and it became unhealthy. That operation was abandoned probably early in the summer of 1944.

The next step seemed to be to supply them by air, so we were flown in to various places in Bosnia, in Slovenia, -- I beg pardon. We never could get into Slovenia by air, so we were ordered to march into Slovenia. We had guides and they would take us through swamps where there was no liaison, and we tried to lay out an airfield to bring supplies through.

Mr. TAVENNER. How long did you continue in your work with the underground in Yugoslavia?

Mr. HAYDEN. Until late in November of that year, when I was sent home for a 30-day leave in the States.

Mr. TAVENNER. During the period when you operated with the underground in Yugoslavia, will you tell us just how close your relationship was with the leaders and the rank and file of that movement?

Mr. HAYDEN. Well, of course, being a very junior officer myself, I was a second lieutenant at that time, most of us were lieutenants, we didn't actually come in contact on an operative level with the so-called "brass." We established a tremendously close personal feeling with these people. We had enormous, I would say unlimited, respect for the way they were fighting. I think that respect was reciprocated. We tried to do the best we could. We got quite steamed up by it. I myself was steamed up considerably by it. I had never experienced anything quite like that, and it made a tremendous impression on me. We knew they were Communist-led, we knew they had commissars, but there was very little discussion of that. We couldn't discuss those things very much because we didn't know the language.

Mr. TAVENNER. And you were fighting a common foe at that time?

Mr. HAYDEN. That we were, and I think we conducted ourselves fairly well.

Mr. TAVENNER. You say your relationship with the Partisan movement had a deep effect upon you. What do you mean by that?

Mr. HAYDEN. Precisely this: As I have, I believe, mentioned, in 1940, when I was still an actor, and in 1941, I had had conversations with this man Tompkins. I wish I could describe my first reaction, because I think it would be typical of the experience so many people have had. I was appalled at the idea of what he was telling me about, but I did listen. He would give me literature, propaganda, and I would scan it briefly and burn it up.

When this Yugoslavia thing came up, I wrote to him. I began writing, "Maybe you were not so wrong. These people are doing a magnificent job." I thought I had better figure this thing out.

He, in turn, reciprocated by, I would say, bombarding me with Communist literature-- People's World, Daily Worker, New Masses, and others I can't remember. I was impressed by the fact that the reports of that thing printed in the United States in this literature were accurate as regards the Partisans in Yugoslavia. Apparently the people in the States knew this. This had an effect on me because it made me conscious of what these people knew that apparently the rest of us didn't know. That was about the size of it at that time.

I engaged in quite a lot of correspondence with Tompkins at that time. I was all steamed up. We all were. I can remember in the interior of Yugoslavia when the crews of planes would leave their shoes, anything they could spare, with the Partisans, they were that impressed, and I don't think a G.I. impresses too easily as a rule. This had a strong emotional impact on all of us.

Mr. TAVLNNER. Did you have political discussions with the Partisans or any groups of them?

Mr. HAYDEN. No. I would honestly say not at all; not at all. Once in a while when we were back in Italy we would sit around and a few at Bari headquarters would talk a little bit about what was going on, but we never got very much involved in it. I remember a couple times when I would have a story in some of this literature Tompkins sent me, I would show it to them, and they were very pleased. There were no involved or detailed political discussions at all; not at all.

Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee what the final result and effect was upon you of the correspondence you were having with Captain Tompkins and the experience that you were undergoing in Yugoslavia in working with the underground?

Mr. HAYDEN. The final effect?

Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. The net result?

Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

Mr. HAYDEN. Well,--

Mr. TAVENNER. Let us put it this way: What was the effect at that time?

Mr. HAYDEN. At that time--I am glad you put it that way--there was a sort of thing churning inside me that I didn't know how to handle, but it seemed there was something in this world that I ought to find out about. That was the net result of the whole thing.

When I got home on leave in December 1944, one of the first things I wanted to do, on a purely emotional basis, was go back and see Tompkins and talk to him about this thing, which I did. I flew out to the Coast and basked in the reflected glory of the Partisan movement. Tompkins sort of showed me off as an exhibit.

Mr. TAVENNER. Before leaving the Yugoslavian section of your testimony, were you recognized in any way by the Government of Yugoslavia or by the Partisans for your services in working with the underground?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. TAVENNER. What was it?

Mr. HAYDEN. I was given a decoration called the Order of Merit. I haven't picked it up yet, but I have the citation. I guess it is at the Embassy. I don't know where it is. The medal itself, I don't know where it is, but I have in my files the citation, the Order of Merit, which I think came for the same operation for which I got a Silver Star.

Mr. TAVENNER. Was that the second highest decoration that could be awarded to a person of a foreign country, foreign to Yugoslavia?

Mr. HAYDEN. I am not sure of that. I have heard that it was, but I am not sure at all.

Mr. TAVENNER. So you received a Silver Star as a decoration?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. And in addition the other decoration which you mentioned?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAVENNER. On your return to the United States for your 30-day leave, did you again see Captain Warwick Tompkins?

Mr. HAYDEN. That was the first thing I did. I didn't know where I was going to be sent. The Yugoslav situation seemed to be more or less under control at that time. They had gotten the Partisans a great deal more equipment and built them into some semblance of strength, so some of us were sent back to the States, and I was anxious to get in the same kind of work somewhere else. I didn't know where, but I hoped it would be possible to get into guerrilla outfits, because it is very interesting; it is stimulating; it is better than a lot of duty could be.

So I contacted Tompkins. Subsequently, through him, I contacted people in New York who I thought would know about guerrilla outfits elsewhere, as they had had accurate dope about Yugoslavia.

I flew out to San Francisco, met Tompkins, and for five or six days I was on a merry-go-round. He took me around and I talked ad nauseam about Yugoslavia, but they were apparently interested. I met a great many people, some of whom may or may not have been Communists. Some I know now were. At that time I wasn't paying too much attention to that.

Mr. TAVENNER. Let me ask you several questions in detail about that. You were the guest of Captain Tompkins on your trip to the West Coast at that time?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, I was.

Mr. TAVENNER. Do you recall whether, on the day after your arrival there, you had dinner with three individuals, including Captain Tompkins, one of whom was Isaac Folkoff?

Mr. HAYDEN. I remember having dinner or lunch with this fellow called "Pop" Folkoff, yes.

Mr. TAVENNER. Do you remember where that lunch was held?

Mr. HAYDEN. I do not.
